About the Webinar

Sustainable use of land, water, energy and biological resources for the overall development of the human society is necessary for the biosphere and human civilization to continue to co-exist. The webinar hopes to provide a platform for sharing critical understanding of the interactions between development and environment. The informative lectures of the speakers will elucidate the technical, economic, ethical and philosophical aspects of sustainable development. The webinar will be beneficial for students, research scholars, educators and environmentalists.
